

A Matter of Honour

On a quiet, dark October night at the beginning of the sixteenth century a man is murdered in a small, dingy studio in Venice. Of itself an unremarkable occurrence for this time and place. But, five hundred years later, this murder sets off an extraordinary chain of events which begins with a young British academic and a wealthy but enigmatic American businessman meeting in a great stone mansion in northern England. Soon the young academic discovers that something is driving his American friend - is it academic fame? Or notoriety? Is it money? Or is it something else - a matter of honour?
