

The Angel (Jacquot Book 4)

A murderous slice of French country life
When three generations of a wealthy German family are brutally murdered in their Provencal home, Chief Inspector Daniel Jacquot heads up an investigation that rapidly turns into one of the most baffling and personal cases of his career. After a local man is arrested for the murders Jacquot cannot shift the feeling that theres something wrong, something theyve all missed. His suspicions are confirmed when a mysterious young woman arrives in the village claiming a special insight. With her help, Jacquot follows a trail that leads back more than half a century a story of love and betrayal, hatred and blackmail in which Jacquots own family had a tragic part to play. (Originally published as Jacquot and the Angel. Long-listed for the Theakston Old Peculier Crime Novel of the Year)

Reviews for the Jacquot series Well-drawn and strongly flavoured Rich, spicy, and served up with unmistakable relish. The Literary Review French country life has never been so fraught with sinister atmosphere, and it is only a matter of time before readers will be eagerly anticipating each new trip to Daniel Jacquots France. Barry Forshaw, The Rough Guide to Crime Fiction Well written and compelling. Tight plotting, excellent characterisation and lyrical descriptions mean Jacquot is here to stay. The Daily Mail A rich, colourful setting... OBrien truly makes us feel, smell, hear, and see Marseilles. He writes skillfully, and the city setting simply reaches out and surrounds the reader. Definitely recommended. Mystery Scene Brilliant police procedurals. If you have read any of the books by Fred Vargas then you will certainly enjoy the Jacquot series as well.
