

Nomad VI

Nomad VI is a suspenseful spy novel about the most advanced defensive weapons system ever developed by man, using the latest advance in infrared and laser beam technology. Yet the State Department decides to reveal its existence to a special session of the U.N. Security Council. Why? Dr. Alan Dempsy, originator of the system and project director of Houston's Pioneer Institute of Technology, finds himself faced with more than scientific problems when mysterious tampering with the entry hatch of the Nomad sitting on the launch pad at Cape Canaveral coincides with an unexplained eagerness by the State Department to lift the secrecy veiling the project, and in no less a manner than having Dempsy himself disclose it to the UN. Thus begins an adventurous trip to New York, involving a plot filled with continually surprising twists and turns. Here is a well-written, well-constructed work with vividly portrayed and fully formed characters. A complex story of loyalty and betrayal, romance and seduction. The brutality of Vietnam and a broken heart. Written in a strong and lively style, it goes deep into, and offers the reader an inside look at the operations of the KGB, the FBI, the Pentagon, the Special Operations of the military and Cape Canaveral. Graphic and gripping in its description of high-level espionage, it is both powerful and compelling. Set in the Cold War Era, the thrilling ending will keep the readers on the edge of their seat and give their heart a little faster beat.
